Gibby Waitzkin, The Truth Continuum
Gibby Waitzkin is a fiber artist, papermaker, and photographer. For over 35 years she has used her arts and design background to support arts advocacy issues and environmental and women’s rights. This installation transforms part of the Wilson Museum into a visual representation of strength, community, and interconnection. Plant samples and a video of the artist’s process reveal her centuries-old papermaking techniques. This exhibit and its related programs are sponsored in part by the City of Roanoke through the Roanoke Arts Commission.
Pulped Under Pressure

With traditional hand papermaking at its core, Pulped Under Pressure underscores important contemporary issues steeped in history and craft. These works encourage a contemplative slowing down even as they urge acknowledgement of the issues facing civilization today. Each of the artists starts simply with a foundation of pulp made from natural fibers. Their multifaceted results incorporate a rich range of printmaking, letterpress, papercutting, and installation with a diversity of reused materials. In very unique ways, these artists consider paper beyond its most common function as a passive surface of record or craft. Instead, the material is transformed and imbedded with content that turns communication into a public practice.

Written by Lauren Gunderson. Directed by Lauren Brooke Ellis.

Script-in-hand staged reading that captures the life and action of the play. Four badass women lose their heads in this irreverent comedy set during the French Revolution’s Reign of Terror. A playwright, a queen, a rebel, and an assassin drive this dream-tweaked play, which is about violence, legacy, art and activism, feminism and terrorism, compatriots and chosen sisters, and how we actually go about changing the world. This production is rated R with strong language and implied violence.
