

Hollins University M.A.T/M.A.T.L.

Summer 2026 Newsletter Message from The Director

Greetings from Hollins University! We are proud to offer two distinct graduate programs in education at Hollins. The Master of Arts in Teaching and Learning (M.A.T.L.) is a fully online program for currently licensed K-12 teachers who want to hone their teaching skills and become a master teacher. The online format of the M.A.T.L. program offers full-time working adults the flexibility they need to pursue post-graduate education without having to juggle commutes to campus or sacrifice time away from family or work, but the synchronous time online helps students get to know one another and their professors in an engaging, small-group online meeting room. These courses are all offered in the evenings and in the summer via synchronous online meetings and/or asynchronous coursework.

The Master of Arts in Teaching program is for provisionally licensed teachers or students who have a college degree and want to earn their teaching license so they can begin teaching. This program is delivered in a hybrid format. Students meet with their professors and classmates face-to-face on campus from 6-9 PM one night every other week. Upon completion of the program requirements, graduates earn a master's degree in addition to a Virginia teaching license.

In an effort to streamline the information we share with you, we have changed the format of our newsletter. It now contains information about upcoming classes only. We hope you will appreciate the shorter format! All information about registration, important dates, tuition and fees, and other policies and procedures is now available in our Policies and Procedures Manual, located on My.Hollins under the graduate programs tab. If you still have questions after consulting the manual, don't forget that we are always happy to help – just send us an email!

Warmly,

Teri Wagner

ART 556: Advanced Drawing Methods and Concepts in Art

Al Gury

CRN: 60460

The goal of this online graduate level course is imparting a solid, confident and practical understanding of essential topics and practices. This advanced art course, each week will focus on a specific topic and a project assignment. Topics will include the materials of drawing and a higher level of drawing shapes, measuring, forms, perspective, depth, use of line, understanding light and shade, and composition. Exercises will include the use of charcoal and pencil drawing, use of pastel drawing, watercolor drawing and color concepts and use of a variety of media. Subjects for the lessons will focus on both observation (still life, portraits, interiors, etc.) as well as independent creativity. Visually rich art images and history, video demonstrations of the class topics by the instructor and stimulating Q&A makes this course student-centered, stimulating, and practical.

Each class session is recorded so students can still review any class they have to miss for any reason.

ONLINE: Synchronous and Asynchronous Learning, Thursday 6:00-7:30 PM

ART 544: Prehistoric to Gothic (4)

Al Gury

CRN: 60461

This visually rich exciting and informative graduate course takes a broad look at the development of world art and culture from the cave paintings of the Prehistoric era to the development of Gothic art and architecture in Europe as a foundation for the modern world. As an online course, students will explore the roots, development and cultural context of art in each time period, with a focus on the visual qualities of the art and how the art was made. The artists, methods and varieties of the art of each time period will be examined and illuminated with rich anecdotes and video demos of art methods. Weekly Zoom meeting will present the course content. Through discussion and posted written comments, students will present their reactions and reflections on this exciting evolution of art.

ONLINE: Synchronous and Asynchronous Learning, Thursday 7:30-9:00 PM

ENG 550: Special Topics: Asia's America; America's Asia (4)

Joe Milan

CRN: 60462

The bones of American Literature are built from many cultures. This course's primary concern is to excavate the transnational cultural exchanges of philosophy and literature between East Asia and the United States as originally explored in Yoshinobu Hakutani's East-West Literary Imagination. With a selection of major works, authors and themes, we will examine how those exchanges influenced the evolution of what we define as American Literature and how it has in turn has influenced the literature of East Asia.

ONLINE: Synchronous and Asynchronous Learning, Wednesday 7:00-9:00 PM

ENG 591: Shakespeare (4)

Lauren Coker-Durso

CRN: 60463

In this course, students are to engage in the close reading of various Shakespearean dramas (history, comedy, and tragedy) while keeping in mind the cultural contexts in which they are written and performed. The course will additionally focus on many of Shakespeare's pervasive themes—including treatments of gender and sexuality, political and familial dynamics, issues of theatricality, and representations of diseased or disabled bodies in relation to healthy ones—in the original works as well as in modern adaptations when possible. Representative theoretical and critical works will supplement interpretation.

ONLINE: Synchronous and Asynchronous Learning, Monday 5:30-7:00 PM

HIST 524: 20TH-Century American History (4)

David Buyze

CRN: 60464

In this class we read and discuss major events, personalities, and themes in the study of American history since 1900. Topics covered will include the effects of war on American states and society, the origins, patterns, and consequences of major reform movements (New Deal, civil rights, women's rights, Great Society, Reagan "Revolution), the evolution of the presidency, and more.

ONLINE: Synchronous and Asynchronous Learning, Monday 5:30-7:00 PM

HIST/HUM 520: Nations, Borders, and Populism (4)

David Buyze

CRN: 60464

This course explores the complex intersections of nationalism, territorial borders, and the rise of populist movements in the modern world. Through an interdisciplinary lens, we will examine the historical, political, and cultural foundations of nation-states, focusing on the ways in which borders have shaped identity, citizenship, migration, and perspectives on refugees. Key topics will include the evolution of nationalism, the impact of globalization on national sovereignty, the politics of immigration, and the resurgence of populist movements across different regions with a particular focus on the Americas and Europe. Students will engage with critical theoretical frameworks, literature, journalism, media, and contemporary debates about populism's role in reshaping national policies and global relations. The experience of this course will develop a deeper understanding of how populism challenges traditional notions of the nation-state, the role borders play in both exclusionary and inclusionary political practices, and issues concerning belonging and marginalization.

ONLINE: Synchronous and Asynchronous Learning, Tuesday 5:30-7:00 PM

HUM 503C: HUMANITIES CORE: (Post) Human Futures (4)

Jordan Fallon

CRN: 60471

How might an exploration of human meaning help us to imagine and navigate potential futures? This course, drawing from philosophy, poetry, fiction, film, and music, explores contemporary and ancient ways of grappling with questions regarding human existence. In particular, the emergent notion of "post humanism" is critically explored in terms of contemporary social, technological, and ecological concerns.

ONLINE: Synchronous and Asynchronous Learning, Monday 7:00-9:00 PM

MATH 517: Discrete Mathematics (4)
CRN: 60453

Bryan Faulkner

This course will examine the various aspects of discrete mathematics, which includes several branches of mathematics that deal with objects that can assume only distinct values. Set Theory, Graph Theory and Number Theory are just a few of the branches that would be classified as “discrete”. Topics include formal logic notation, proof by induction, proof by contradiction, set theory, Boolean algebra, combinatorics, and graph theory. The aim of the course is to strengthen the graduate students’ knowledge of the various principles associated with discrete mathematics fields.

ONLINE: Synchronous and Asynchronous Learning, Thursday 6:00-8:00 PM.

POLS 550: Special Topics: Politics and Literature (4)
CRN: 60469

Ed Lynch

Are there any such things as simple stories? Do all works of literature have political messages? In this course, we will look at a wide variety of literary genres, from children’s books to classic epics. In some, we will find obvious political messages; in others, the message, if there is one, will be much more subtle. The process of finding political messages will reveal much about political science, related social sciences and the analytical process.

ONLINE: Synchronous and Asynchronous Learning, Thursday 6:00-8:00 PM.

POLS 550: Special Topics Refugees and Forced Migration Studies (4)
CRN: 60470

Ashleigh Breske

This course will examine significant political, social, and economic issues related to the movement of displaced peoples (both internally and externally displaced). We will explore the concepts of enculturation, socialization, and adaptation. In the course, we will also evaluate key concepts related to displacement, borders, migration, and international policies through an analysis of national policies, advocacy responses, and media sources to understand current issues related to displacement. We begin by talking about displacement and global trends we see today. Forms of displacement include both internal and external (cross-border) movement. Our discussions will look critically at global conflict and the laws and/or policies that cause displacement. Throughout the course, we will analyze some of the significant political, economic, and social issues that influence the movement of people across borders and evaluate the varied relationships between refugees and their new homes through concepts such as enculturation, socialization, and adaptation.

ONLINE: Synchronous and Asynchronous Learning, Wednesday 6:00-8:00 PM.

SOSC 550: Special Topics: David Bowie and the Performance of Identity (4)
CRN: 60467

David Buyze

This course focuses on the music and cultural icon David Bowie. Bowie’s career spanned more than fifty years in the 20th and 21st centuries and his impact on music and culture is indelible. We will consider the personas or alter egos and eras of David Bowie in the interpretation and analysis of his music through text, screen, stage, fashion, art, and other cultural dynamics. In the early part of Bowie’s career, such personas as Ziggy Stardust, Aladdin Sane, Major Tom, and The Thin White Duke are easily recognizable, yet in the latter part of his career it is much more difficult to ascertain a distinct persona or alter ego that he is inhabiting through his music and in the genres that he is working in. In this course, we will closely analyze Bowie’s music in the interpretation of his personas and eras in considering the impact and meaning of his music on culture and the human condition, and how he enabled vital new ways to think about the performance of identity, gender fluidity, and existence.
